

A typical ger comes with these parts

- Roof poles
- Expandable, wood lattice wall sections
- Roof crown with a smoke hole and window frame inserts
- Two center support poles
- Double layer wooden door with the outside being a full door and the inside split into a double door
- All ties and ropes
- Durable factory-processed natural felt covering
- Two water repellent canvas covers, one decorative
- Cotton liner

- All of the wood parts are made from locally sourced and renewable larch, birch or pine woods.
- The door, roof poles, and roof crown are hand-painted with beautiful traditional Mongolian design using lead-free paint.
- The ropes are made from yak hair.
- The lattice walls are tied together with camel sinew.
- The felt is 5/8 of an inch thick, all natural sheep wool that has been cleaned and processed in a factory. Factory processing makes the felt an even thickness, very clean, with no sheep smell and more bug resistant.

FOR SALE Mongolian Gers (Yurts)

FIRE
Flagstaff International Relief Effort

Mongolian Gers

A traditional Mongolian ger (known as a yurt outside of Mongolia) is a handmade, felt covered, wooden-framed structure used by nomadic cultures.

Our authentic Mongolian gers are hand-painted with traditional designs and constructed of renewable materials. They are fair trade, bought directly from a local Mongolian manufacturer whom FIRE has been working with since 2006. Each ger is unique and made to order.

The base price includes the wood frame; all natural, thick, felt insulation cover; two canvas covers; two layered door; window frame inserts for the crown; and delivery to Flagstaff, AZ.

Color, height, window and alternative delivery options are available.

A ger makes a great primary or secondary
residence, guest room,
studio, rental, or anything else
you can imagine!
